

Practical / Normal life Scenarios OR Spiritual Warfare?

1. A teen ager dosen't get enough time with parents or healthy adult leaders who help this 15 year old discover who he is in Christ. He feels withdrawn and alone and gets connected at school with a "goth" crowd that dosen't like authority and they are preoccupied with death and morbid conversations. He begins to read books on the occult and play role playing games online that seems fascinating to him. So now he wants to explore with some other groups he has heard about outside of school. His youth pastor at church says that this stuff is not good but he hasn't ever really built a good relationship with the youth pastor and his parents let him skip attending church and youth anytime he wants. .. (finish the story, good or bad?)

2. Mom goes back to work because the family is in too much debt. She gets a promotion and spends most of her time with her co workers. Her kids feel abandoned but don't say anything. The teen daughter finds comfort in a relationship with an older boy. He pressures her to do things and she dosen't want to say no because he might reject her and she would feel more alone. Nobody talks about what is going on, she is driven by guilt and shame. Now she is alone to make a decision about abortion to make the problem go away. The story could go both ways...

3. Mom goes back to work because the family is in too much debt. She gets a promotion and spends most of her time with her co workers. She finds fulfillment in pleasing her supervisor and spends time alone with him because of work...

4. Dad is never criticized by the ladies at the office, so he flirts to feel more macho. His wife complains and criticizes...

5. A churchgoer feels snubbed because the pastor didn't greet them or talk with them after church. They stop going...stop reading the Bible, stop praying...

6. a Sunday school teacher has an unruly kid that happens to belong to an important deacon but tried to address it and conflict went south...
7. You give a generous offering at church and then saw waste in the spending or unnecessary budgeted items in the annual report...
8. You try to forgive a relative or close friend when they never take responsibility or validate your offense. It feels like all you can do is hold on to bitterness and unforgiveness.
9. A few friends come over and start to have some drinks. One thing leads to another, you all go out to socialize and men get separated from the ladies and...
10. A family vacation starts off great until you lose your wallet, or a kid gets sick, or the plans were not locked in for the trip and you have to improvise and overspend and cant visit a certain family member in Virginia...